P.A.L.S. RESOURCE GUIDE

P.A.L.S. Resource Guide (Promoting Academic and Learning Support)

This resource guide contains information about academic support programs offered by churches, childcare providers, and community agencies affiliated with advocates who seek better educational results for all children. These organizations are primarily located in areas of the city in which a significant number of students are identified as performing below average on state-required tests.

The purpose of this resource guide is to provide parents, guardians, and caregivers with information pertaining to free or inexpensive educational resources in their residential area. We encourage parents to be aware of services that are available throughout the school year. Early access and utilization of these services have the potential to increase student performance and self-esteem.

Created by Religious Educators, Childcare Providers, and Community Agencies in collaboration with the Volunteer Talent Center of the Jefferson County Public Schools (JCPS)

Religious Educators, Childcare Providers, and Community Agencies

Background—During the summer of 2015, religious educators from nine churches began to pilot a kindergarten-readiness program in Vacation Bible Schools that serve children in sections of the community where students were reported as not scoring well on the BRIGANCE Screening Test. The group has expanded to include childcare providers and community agencies.

Play Cousins Collective is an African-American parenting collective. We are a non-profit agency that utilizes ancestral methods of survival and resource sharing and builds upon that knowledge by celebrating and utilizing the modern-day critical-thinking skills and cultural genius of our collective villages.

We serve to engage families in community conversations, parent and child playdates and opportunities for civic engagement, resource sharing and personal growth. By providing children’s programming at community events, meetings, and other functions geared toward economic uplift or self-edification, we bridge the gap between a parent’s desire to be involved and childcare.

When organizations work with Play Cousins Collective to provide children’s programming, they are offering a safe, positive, and educational space for the children of the adults they engage. Play Cousins Collective goes beyond offering childcare but actually plans curricula based on the event at hand so that parents and youth can discuss what they learned and contributed to on their way home. All Play Cousins Collective lesson plans include children’s literature, art, music, STEM activities, and games.

Our Innovative Youth Advocates are CPR- and first aid-certified, have had background checks completed, and have experience working with children. Our staff works to share resources with parents on connecting to community as well as techniques on providing gentle and positive child rearing and sources for youth learning.

Children are a vital part of our community, and they can't afford to be forgotten. We must take strides to build our society around the most vulnerable among us, and that includes the little ones. At Play Cousins Collective, we are building villages around our children.
